Executive Summary

- A problem statement – a description of the most important aspects of the problem (or challenge);

In 2010 the City council of Plovdiv voted a change of purpose and status of the current property. Once the largest and the most modern cinema building was pronounced best to turn into a multilevel parking area with public use. From a public building with central cultural purpose it became a private municipal property and documented as a garage. The problem itself has various aspects which can be divided into four spheres of influence: Cultural, material, social and infrastructural. Therefore the problem generated a unique citizen attempt to interact and participate in a campaign engaged to resume a cultural heritage. The case about Cosmos cinema revealed the functioning difficulties of Municipality of Plovdiv in communication with citizens and NGOs.

- The historic response – brief information about how the problem had been handled beforehand and why it had not been fully resolved;

Due to the liberalized cinema distribution and the transition to new open market values most of the state owned cultural centers stopped functioning or changed their purpose and state. During that time there is no public information about the municipality cultural program and a plan for Cosmos cinema to be developed.

The final inappropriate handling of the problem happened a year ago, when the City council of Plovdiv voted a change of purpose and status of the Cosmos cinema theatre. The decision was taken with no public discussion and administrative transparency.

Due to the adverse conditions in the concession contract there have been several unsuccessful attempts to resume the building. During those decades another aspect of the problem arose - the historical heritage of Cosmos cinema theatre needed to be handled.

- The project response – a brief description of the good practice and the changes that took place subsequently.

The good practice is an essential working model, based on the collaboration between citizen initiative, Institutions and Nongovernmental sector.

It started with consequential administrative inquiries for public information, which was widely shared through media and networks. Based on core principles the established initiative committee has planned and achieved certain objectives.

A precedential official public debate in the municipality's hall took place, in which participated members of the City Council of Plovdiv, the initiative committee, expert organisations and residents of Plovdiv involved in the campaign. It gave the conclusion that the decision concerning Cosmos cinema's status should be reconsidered on the next Council session.

Seven months after the first decision, the city council of Plovdiv gathered again and revoted unanimously the purpose and status of the current property of Cosmos Cinema as a public building and a cultural centre. The next decision was connected with gathering future ideas for reconstructing and renovating the old building of Cosmos cinema, which should proceed to a certain project idea contest.

Community Data

Basic information about the municipality where the good practice was implemented – its name, geographic location and a description of its characteristics (e.g. farming community etc.) etc.

Plovdiv is the second-largest city in Bulgaria after Sofia with a population of 338.000 inhabitants according to Census 2011. It is located on the banks of the Maritsa river, approximately 152 km (94 mi) southeast of the Bulgarian capital Sofia and nearly central location in the Balkan peninsula. The main characteristics of the municipality could be revealed in the spheres of culture and education. In 1999 Plovdiv was host of the "European Month of Culture Program". On the traditional stages in the city and on alternative culture spaces, the program realized the biggest culture forum in Bulgaria at the turn of the century.

Community Background

Information on the most important factors affecting the work of the municipality. The description should reflect:

- Internal conditions – a description of those aspects affecting the implementation of the good practice – staffing, financial resources, technical capacity etc.

Only personal financial and technical capacity was available.

- External conditions – a description of the economic, social and political situation, and of those factors affecting the work of the municipality (e.g. its location close to an important transportation route or participation in a large international project) that might have affected the development of the good practice.

The statistic data, collected by The National Statistic Institute (NSI), was inquired as public information. The regional sectors of employment diagram shows the core economical and social factors affecting the implementation of the good practice. It gives the clear conclusion that there are two branches with larger amount of employment percentage and consequently economic interest, which are prerequisites for demolishing Cosmos Cinema building and initialising the problems in the municipality.

Data source: NSI

The Automotive repair (<21%) is related to the increased usage of vehicles, which causes problems of infrastructural character and therefore raises a great demand of public parking places in the center of the city. The other important branch, Construction (11%), reveals business perspectives, which would benefit from the future parking building. Even it is lower percentage of employment the culture branch (1%) involves the intrinsic logic of the city, its history and contemporary tendencies. This sector gave the positive, successful affect on the development and recognition of the good practice.

- Political Situation, Factors that affected the implementation of the good practice:

The city council of Plovdiv represents the political attendance, elected in 2007 with (36 %) of the citizens in the municipality and it is the principal legislative institution on local level.

Diagram 2 shows the multilayered stratification between parties in the City Council of Plovdiv, which used to imply essential difficulties in consentaneous decision making and lack of sustainability.

It was revealed in September 2008 when there was a change of majorities and respectfully the chairmanship dissolved, replaced by another party's representative.

The main administrative structures of the city council are the 11th specified permanent commissions. According to the Law for the Local Government and Local Administration each municipality commission is elected from the members of the city council. The above mentioned articulate three fundamental tasks:

- To research the population demands and to develop proposals solving the problems;
- To support the city council, to prepare decisions up to questions, submitted for discussion and answering;
- To control and monitor the implementation of city council decisions.

The schedule of the commissions' meetings and their minutes of meeting are not available as public information. After inquire and access to the information, the documents in the Cosmos case do not consist minuted statements and discussions. This has encouraged the initiative committee to participate and to record the case related commissioning work session.

The administrative participation experience is developed due to regular practice, inquiries and principles. They are represented also with the Recommendation 310 (2011), "Local and regional democracy in Bulgaria" of the COE-Congress of Local and Regional Authorities on its 21th Session.

- A description of the problems that arose during the implementation of the practices and the remedies applied;

On certain level private sector interests tried to intimidate the decisions and actions of the Initiative committee. Consequently it initialised wide joint decision making process between the members, which isolated any further inappropriate influence.

To resume its independent position was the main difficulty that the community faced. It was remedied by unanimous agreement between the members of the community constituting a network of working core principles: citizen accountability, administrative transparency, legitimate actions, recognisable public position, wide information sharing b/n the community, efficiency and innovation.

Another problem that arose during the implementation of the good practice was Denied access for public information, which led to two successful court sessions on regional and national level. The information inquired was tightly connected with decisions about Cosmos Cinema Case.

Results achieved

Every petition request was responded and the fundamental one resulted in a precedential for the new Plovdiv history official public debate in the municipality hall. The discussion led to unanimously revoked decision of the City Council in restoring the public status of Cosmos Cinema building.

An essential working model based on the collaboration between citizen initiative and Nongovernmental sector was validated. This situation was a test case, which led to exploring and accrediting a working administrative path in institutionalised communication between authorities and citizen.

Development in the work and in the communication between professionals and students in the community was achieved during the implementation of the good practice.

Lessons Learned and Conclusions

This part of the case-study should provide guidelines for those wishing to implement the good practice in their own municipalities. It should contain:

- A presentation of the key points which led to success, incorporating the factors unique to the community;

The successful key points are lying in the functioning communication between the elements of the community establishment and the participatory democracy values which led to the implementing of the Good Practice.

Two main lessons have been learned and specific guidelines have been verified:

- The Community should be established on the base of common ideological coherence and identical main principles.
- There should be certain objectives determined and perspective action plan created.
- The relations between the three logic groups (Community Establishment, Principles, Sub-processes) is the primary prerequisite for sustainable development of the good practice (see Appendix B).

- Information about the sustainability of the good practice;

The dynamical sustainability of the good practice is founded on the constant presence of competent human resource, which has been leading through the entire period of nine months to successfully achieved objectives. As it is displayed at the loading graph, the initiative committee reacts mobilised. The difference between loading peaks and average loading indicates the capability reservation.

The Cosmos Cinema Case widened the institutional circle of involvement and shows cumulative growth of successful stages and procedure development even after the accomplished goals. By implementing effective project management perspectives and innovative ideas for future progress, the initiative committee ensures the Sustainability of the good practice.

- A presentation of any future action to be taken.

The last decision of the City Council revealed a necessity for a new organizational form, represented in innovative quote stratification. It gave perspectives for designing and conducting contemporary cinema culture in Plovdiv, resuming the historical identity of Cosmos cinema building. Participation in the development of the national culture strategy is also part of the scheduled future plans.

Based on the achieved results the initiative committee is motivated to share the experienced lessons, accumulated through the implementation of the good practice. In order to increase the administrative operability and understanding of politics it would be healthful to articulate and introduce case based reasoning model for participation in local government, which would be performed in a faster and optimised way. It essentially corresponds to the C.L.E.A.R. framework developed by Prof. Gerry Stocker.
